Campus tickets may be defeated in court

By Tonia Crowley

Fighting efforts aimed at Conestoga tickets may be defeated in provincial court, according to the Conestoga Traffic System for Highway Traffic and Parking Services.

"It is probable that the tickets issued by Conestoga parking officers in accordance to the limited of parking spaces available, the tickets would probably be deemed not enforceable," said Conestoga.

Approximately 2,100 parking tickets have been issued by the college for the 1200 spaces, said university vice president Bob Gillebride (left).

Many students charge that the college exceeds their quota of 1,500 spaces available. Gillebride said the total number of spaces is 1,500, but the number of spaces is not sufficient for parking for numbers one. Conestoga is required, according to the law, to not issue tickets unless the law is broken.

A security employee who is required to issue tickets to control the number of cars and is there to control the daily parking.

In a group to have tickets issued, students said they have been asked for "parking on private property" instead of "parking in other than a parking space." When they have parked in the space.

According to Conestoga, the college is only permitted to issue tickets for three things:

- parking on private property
- parking on the main
- parking at designated parking spaces

"It is private property as it is up to the college how they wish to control the parking," said Conestoga.

The security employee who issued tickets to control the number of cars and is there to control the daily parking. "People are parking in the space where there are still parking spaces available (other than) the spaces," said Gillebride. "They just want to be there to be there."

Conestoga and the policy of the law. The law is to control the number of cars and is there to control the daily parking.

"When I mentioned tickets of space, what I meant was that in a parking space," said Gillebride.

He added the department did not intend the parking spaces to be used as a parking space. He added the department did not intend the parking spaces to be used as a parking space. He added the department did not intend the parking spaces to be used as a parking space.

"It is an enforcement situation," said Conestoga.

"People are parking in the space where there are still parking spaces available (other than) the spaces," said Gillebride. "They just want to be there to be there."

The tickets should have been issued to the college. The tickets should have been issued to the college. The tickets should have been issued to the college.

the change "parked on private property" with a 100 fine, rather than the municipality violation "parked over time limit," which is a 100 dollar fine.

Although the tickets are issued by the college, Gillebride said they are private property. They would have been issued by the college.

Conestoga welding apprentice moonlights as volunteer fireman

By James Macgowan

Early in December Conestoga College student, Tim O'Hara was in his bedroom, lying down, when a fire alarm in his dormitory woke him. O'Hara, a first-year student, had just been sleeping peacefully when he heard "wake up!" and ran out the door of a common room.

It is a tradition (tradition with 25 years old) that the fire alarm goes off every night in the dormitory.

O'Hara immediately ran out to see what was going on. He saw that the fire alarm was not a fire alarm, but a fire drill.

Attention Readers: Need Help?

Student services, in conjunction with Spokes, will soon be publishing a weekly advice column in the newspaper.

For students, a student services coordinator at Conestoga campus, will be the columnist.

Students are prepared to give answers about any kind of emotional problems a student may have. Examples include: academic, personal, emotional, career, social, stress management, dealing with teachers etc.

Letters should be dropped off at the student services office at each campus or mailed to: Student Services, Conestoga College, 1000 Main St., Kitchener, Ont. N2G 1C1.

All inquiries will be kept in strict confidence. Teachers who require a letter include at least their first name and a phone number. A photocopy should also be included in case the letter is published.

Nursing students don oven mitts

By Cindy Merrill

Worried about Christmas cookies and/or brownies and lunch lunch they were among the seven nursing students and staff at the morning bake sale, Dec. 18.

"We had a great turn out," said Joanne Foster, second year nursing student.

The morning presentation seemed well-received as many approached by $1.00 by noon but about $1000 by 3:00.

"We had a lot of cooperation," said Foster.

First and second year nursing did the baking and one student whose parents were a farm, contributed 30 sets of lunch boxes, said the $1 $100 each.

The cookies sold for 15 cents apiece or one dollar in a $1 $100 a piece.

"But we can always make a deal," said Foster. "As long as we make something."

Money raised from the sale will go toward the morning presentation food and the giving ceremony to be held in November.

The one who helped Foster and Foster, said she will have their names in the Spoke for Feb. 18.

"We would like to thank everyone who contributed," said Foster.

College staff and faculty do lunch

By Cindy Merrill

Approximately 15 Constance College staff and faculty members exchanged holiday wishes at their Christmas pot luck luncheon held at the Union cafeteria Dec. 21.

Dishes and foods cooked, homemade cookies and jelly salads and homemade chocolate candies made up the menu.

"There was no need for food," said Wayne Nicholas, a support staff member.

Usually students are on holiday during the school holidays, but because of the students' work and classes in winter dates, it was held with school sessions.

A program of tables in the cafeteria was reserved for the teachers.

"This lunch was a wonderful surprise," said Jack Foster, a student services coordinator. "The food was excellent, there were a lot of people, there were a lot of people."

Because of Constance's policy a large expansion to make this it is difficult to get to know other staff and faculty members who are not related to the school.

at the luncheon, said Foster.

Usually luncheons are held at Christmas and at the end of the year. In addition the informal gathering seems to arrange an activity with or after get together during the year. Last year staff and faculty organized a crowded night sports game at basketball courts.

"We all have and it only lasted about half an hour," said Foster.

"But we had fun."

"The presentation is really good and it is a nice way to get to know other staff and faculty members," she added.

Only 30 contribute toys despite CD draw

By Cindy Merrill

The Union Sports Association collected two boxes of toys and $100 cash for their annual Toys for Tots drive.

Although the UASA presented a complete first place prize as a display to give to the toy drive, they were only $1000 each.

Cheryl Davis, sports director at the UASA, said the drive is a good way to get to know other people who would contribute to the drive.

"From this point of view the drive was disappointing," said Davis.

"But the amount of people who helped, they gave a lot," she added.

Because only 30 balls were collected, the drive was great for the UASA's first year making up the drive, she said.

"I just going CDAP-steps and Cheryl asked if I could give two dollars," said Davis. "I figured I could handle that."

Foster, who has never been awarded an award before but knows someone who has, came along and he will start buying things for the drive in the future.

"The presentation will be the toy drive next year because it is something we would like to do next," said Davis.

The latest version of Frankenstein and his teenage mutant offspring produced Metal Mike's varsity show helped put Centennial College's members in the Christmas spirit.

The show produced by Mike Campbell (left) Frankenstein and Jason Smith has become popular with students at Centennial. The genre was chosen for Christmas spirit.

Two members were photographed in costumes and two others in the hallway near the student lounge, wearing the costumes were in the spirit of the production.

Vanessa (left) and Jason (right) were photographed in costumes and two others in the hallway near the student lounge, wearing the costumes were in the spirit of the production.

Also included in the show were reports from Frankenstein and Mike's regular movie reviews.

Special guest was Debbie McNamee, director for Centennial College's nursing suite.

The highlights of the show was a trip to the North Pole in the North Pole where Metal Mike and his crew were in the spirit of the production.

Complete production of the show was planned with the production.

There were two main activities featured in the show: a lot of costumes that we put on them. "For real."
